Unprecedented success is following the holiday week and that the bill is a most attractive one is evinced by the capacity houses attending. The pace set by the vaudeville bill of last week was a hard one to follow, but the imanagement has succeeded in putting together a show which equals if not excels that of last week. Cooper starts the ball a-rolling in a ventriloquial skeeth entitled Fen in a Barber Shop. His closing number, a song, in which five distinctly different voices are heard, is one of the best pleces of ventriloquism ever presented. Clotilide and Montrose keep up the good work with their snappy line of acrobatic foolishness. For a good, lively song and dance team. Coden and Clifford are a hard pair to beat. The Necklace, one of the most pa-thetic pictures ever taken, teaches a powerful story of the reward of van-ity. A clever detective story. Traced by a Kodak, unravels the plot of a mysterious theft.

BROADWAY THEATER.

"The White Squaw."

The purport of the author in writing "The White Squaw," was to give the public a play which is founded on historical facts and to portray characters that have never before been placed on the stage. The heroine of the play, at the age of four, was found by the Chippewa Indian, Michabo, alone in the forest by the side of her dead father, and taken to his wigwag, where he and his wife, Ampata, having no children, loved and cared for her as their own. The white was found by the Chippewa Indian, Michabo, alone in the forest by the side of her dead father, and taken to his wigwag, where he and his wife, Ampata, having no children, loved and cared for her as their own. The white squaw reaches the age of eighteen without having seen a white woman that she can remember. The first one to come under her observation proves to be her own sister, who is of a decidedly different type, being a beautiful bionde. The comedy situations are unique and decidedly new. The two sisters being in love with the same man, the sacrifice and the love of Jacques Cautier for the white squaw, give us a pay, though clean, full of comedy, heart interest and exceptionally strong dramatic situations. It is a play for children as well as grown people.

"Charlotte Temple."

Can an author be sufficiently thanked who writes of the Revolution thanked who writes of the Revolution and lets George Washington sleep quietly and peacefully in his grave without mentioning him even once, and that when the greatest part of the action of the play takes place on American soil? We don't think so, therefore, we tender our most grateful thanks to the author of "Charlotte Temple," a play of 1776 without George Washington in it. Instead the story of the play to be produced at the Broadway theater on Saturday, September 18, matinee and night, al-September 18, matinee and night al September 18, matinee and night, although it dates back more than a hundred and fifty years, is still a stor- of today. It deals with girls; with love; with men, some kind and chivalrous, some thoughtless, vain and unscrupuous, just as they are now, have been, and always will be. There is no run play, no hidden papers and treasures, nothing but real life, b-roliness and unhappiness, a play that makes each unhappiness, a play that makes each man feel responsible for his women-folk and each girl more thoughtful of

This bill for the latter half of the This bill for the latter half of the week contains some of the very best in the field, there being comedy, scenic, magic, educational and dramatic pictures, each one unequalled in its line. A novelty in the musical line is offered by Miss Alwin in the new bill, and she will sing the latest musical hit of the season, entitled "Happiness" This great song is so unlike any other song, that it is universally adopted by the profesion, all declaring that it wins more encores for them than any other song in years. As an ilustrated song she will sing "Just Like the Rose," another song new to this city, and the wonderful flower studies that accompany it are a positive delight to the eye.

Gets It Going and Coming.

The people who imagined that shoes would be any cheaper under the new tariff regulation of free entrance on foreign skins were building with but little hope, for experts in shoe prices now announce that such a result is impossible, and that instead of having lower prices the changes are that impossible, and that instead of having lower prices the chances are that prices will be higher, owing to the scarcity of hides. People are said to be eating too little meat, and the less meat we eat the fewer hides are produced in this country. The fewer hides, the higher the price. So, if we eat more meat the price of hides will be lowered. But the price of meat is going up, an increase being announced very recently, so the noor consumer goin—up, an increase being announced very recently, so the poor consumer gets it going and coming. If he eats a lot of meat to increase the amount of hides it costs him a lot of money; if he fails to eat meat to produce hides the price of his shoes goes up. Fine, fine.—Newburyport News.
